Germany resumed full unrestricted submarine warfare. Suspecting this would bring the US into the war, Germany gambled it could defeat Britain before that happened. Meanwhile German forces on the Somme began to withdraw to newly-prepared defences, the so-called Hindenburg Line.

PHOTOGRAPHS ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

Corporal J. Thompson sends us two photographs which he writes he picked up on the 27th January after an attack. They bear the imprimatur of the well-known Romney Studio, King Street, Whitehaven, and on inquiry from Mr. Wilson, we were referred to the lady photographed in them. This is Miss May Lilley, Barker's Court, Market Place, Whitehaven, daughter of Mr. Lilley, a shiprigger, at present employed at Barrow-in-Furness in the shipbuilding yard there. The photographs were in the possession of a Whitehaven soldier, who has been twice wounded, but there is no mention of his name in the recent casualty lists.

CAPTAIN TAKEN PRISONER ON BOARD U BOAT.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Leech, St. Bees, wife of Lieut.-Commander A. Leech, received information on Tuesday night from the Admiralty that her husband had been taken prisoner by the German submarine. CAPT. H. BELL
(ASPATRIA), DIED OF WOUNDS.

"I very much regret that my letter to you should be the bearer of very sad news. Your son Harry died of wounds in hospital yesterday. Perhaps it will be some little consolation if I tell you how it happened. His company was occupying a portion of the Battalion front which I am now holding. It was about five a.m. yesterday morning (Jan. 25) when on going my rounds, I visited him, and he accompanied me around his sector. This, of course, means walking in the open. We had reached his extreme left post, and I was standing close beside him discussing various tactical features. Suddenly an enemy sniper opened fire, and Harry shouted, 'I am hit in the stomach.' Before he had time to fall I picked him up and carried him into a shell hole. On opening his clothes I found a bullet had entered his stomach. I immediately dressed the wound, and sent my orderly back to company headquarters for a stretcher. This was procured in a few minutes, and during the time he was being carried to a dug-out, I telephoned for our medical officer, who reached him in a very short time. He did all that could be done, and then took him back to the main dressing station. We had hopes that the wound would not prove fatal. During the whole time he never lost consciousness and was a real brick. His wonderful spirit and pluck were marvellous, and he never once complained. . . . We have just heard of the wound proving fatal. We shall miss your son very much indeed. He was one of the best company commanders I have, and simply worshipped by his men. He was a brave and fearless man, always cheery, and a real good soldier. More I cannot say, because I personally feel his loss too keenly. . . . Please accept my full sympathy on behalf of myself and the Battalion in your sad bereavement. — Believe me, yours sincerely,

W. B. LITTLE, Major."

He will be better pleased still if he finds a supply of Dainty Dinah Toffee in that parcel—for he loves it, and so do his pals. NETHERWASDALE NEWS.

DEATH OF PRIVATE JOSEPH COWPERTHWAITHE.—We regret to have to record the deaths of two of our parishioners within the last few days. Private Joseph Cowperthwaite, Burckbarrow, 5th Border Regiment, has been killed in action in France. A letter was received on Wednesday morning from the Sister in charge at the casualty hospital at the base, stating that he was severely wounded on Saturday evening, but hoping to have better news to send. A letter from her and a telegram from the headquarters of the regiment followed on Thursday morning stating that he had died on Sunday without recovering consciousness. On Tuesday morning this week a letter written by himself was received, written on Friday, the day before he was wounded, saying that they were expecting to have a rough time on the 27th and 28th. He was the fifth man out of twenty from Wasdale to go down in the war. Albert Howe went down with the Royal Edward; Hugh Park returned from the trenches in France to die at home; Walker Roper died suddenly in the camp at Dunfermline; Crowther Morton and Joseph Cowperthwaite were killed in action in France. There will be a memorial service here for the last-named on Sunday morning.
