Child contact centres and services are neutral places where children of separated families can enjoy contact with their non-resident parents and sometimes other family members, in a comfortable and safe environment. Over four thousand volunteers and staff work in these centres and over seventeen thousand children use them each year. They are run by a variety of independent organisations that form the membership of NACCC, along with affiliated members such as family lawyers, CAFCASS, CAFCASS CYMRU and the judiciary. Child contact services are classified into two distinct categories, supported and supervised, so that families can be referred to an appropriate environment and level of support.

From time to time anybody can find themselves in financial difficulty and in need of a helping hand. For some people, such support may have previously come in the form of a crisis loan or community care grant from the Department for Work and Pensions (DWP) - both of which ended on 31 March 2013 under the Government's welfare reforms. In their place, the DWP has introduced short-term advances for people moving between or onto benefits, and interest free budgeting advances/loans for people in receipt of benefits for six months who experience emergency and unforeseen expenses.
