Save The Date

What's new for 2017?

- Educators will sit alongside the relevant staff groups so it is easier for students to find out about how to work and study in healthcare
- Newcastle University Medical School are attending
- The Armed forces will attend to showcase health careers in the forces
- Possible funding for transport to event

Why encourage your students to go?

Students will get to meet a range of healthcare professionals (those that do the job) and educators (the people who run the course). With over 350 professions in the healthcare, plus the roles in our Blue light services, our organisations wanted to come together to let students explore the role in more detail. It will not be a HR team or marketing team they speak to but real professionals who are passionate about their job.

Gp's	Nursing and midwifery staff
Medics and dentists	Scientific and technical (radiographers, bio scientists, pharmacy)
Paramedics and technicians	Allied Health (Dieticians, Physios, Occupational Health, Podiatry)
Front line Police	Fire service
Social workers	Admin in an health and blue light environment
Domestics	IT in health and blue light environment

Who should attend?

- Year 11 upwards
- Definitely students who have already identified an interest in health related roles
- Anyone else. Many of those who were inspired at our last event had no interest in healthcare and blue light before they came and had not realised the varied roles we have across our organisations.
