

Bereavement Support across Cumbria

The death of a loved one can be among the most difficult moments that any of us will face in our lives, and it often falls on those closest to the deceased and grieving the most to organise the funeral.

The COVID pandemic has affected so much of the normalities of life. The way we die, the way we hold a funeral and the way we grieve have all been affected, meaning that for some, the usual events to mark and manage the loss of a loved one changed or did not happen. It is therefore, so much more important that we are all able to access bereavement support at a time and level that is right for each one of us as an individual.

The government has produced a leaflet, which shares important information to help bereaved families; friends or next of kin make important decisions during this national emergency and guides you to the extra help and support that is available. <https://www.gov.uk/government/publications/support-for-the-bereaved>

Across Cumbria, there are many organisations that offer bereavement support and it is important that following a death we are able to signpost and guide people for appropriate help.

Most people who experience loss will only require low-level support, which involves providing people with information on the grieving process, practical help with tasks, and social support. Family, friends, and colleagues will provide much of this support. For those offering support, this is a time of “watchful waiting;” active listening; reminding people that grief is normal; exploring the emotions they may feel, the person’s thoughts about that and how everyday behaviour or skills might be affected. This level of support will also include community groups, Churches and religious and spiritual organizations (all faiths and none), hospital and hospice bereavement teams, online forums and national support.
