

High speed broadband is now in the Eden valley in Plumpton. One local business who is thrilled with the benefits of fibre is The Pot Place, a garden centre, tea room and farm shop attraction on the edge of the village.

Owners Kevin Roper and Paul Thomas said, " Improved broadband speed and reliability has had such a huge benefit to our business in terms of supporting website maintenance, responding to enquiries, uploading and downloading files and uploading our social media sites.

"The improved fibre service has meant we can also now offer a free and reliable internet connection throughout our tea room where visitors can sit, surf and relax. Prior to the upgrade the service wavered between inconsistent and non-existent!"

Kevin added, "a good connection is vital for rural areas; it allows businesses to expand, publicise and compete with the rest of the world."

The Pot Place is keen to explore additional avenues which the arrival of fibre broadband can bring to their business and urge customers to 'watch this space' in what they describe as exciting times ahead.
