Out of the farmhouse shoo shoo shoo, out of the farmhouse shoo shoo shoo, out of the farmhouse shoo shoo shoo, that's what we do Tom Farmer.

Younger children

This is a great song to sing when teaching your child animal sounds. If you have a book with animals in, you could point to the animal as you make the sound. Enjoy singing the song together then reiterate the different sounds if you see farm animals when out for a walk.

Older children

Have fun singing the song together and make up your own actions. Vary the volume of the different verses, so be very quiet when the farmer is asleep and loud to wake him up! Explain words your child may not know the meaning of, such as dresser, hatstand and haystack.

Animal signs

Often when singing it's fun to add in actions or to learn to sign some of the words. Why not having a go at learning some Makaton signs for farm animals together by following the link below? Talk to your child about signing being another way of communicating.

Small World Play

Small world play is a great way of supporting children to develop their speech and language skills, especially if you play with them and model new sounds/vocabulary or link the play to a particular song or book. Farm play items are widely available and even a few animals could be used with natural resources to create lots of opportunities for play or you could gather resources together to act out the song. Farm figures and vehicles are also great to use outdoors. If you start to give a running commentary as you play or introduce a story, your child may join in or start to copy what you are doing.
